

I understand that Sinclair Broadcasting's intends to require that their local stations air a documentary that has the clear intent of opposing the candidacy of John Kerry, just weeks before the election.

If this is true, than it would appear to be a violation of federal law.

Sinclair is obligated by law to serve the public interest when it uses the public airwaves. Using its privelege to advance its own partisan, political agenda is certainly not in the public interest. I would expect that if Sinclair proceeds with this direct violation, especially with warnings against doing so, that it and its affiliates will be suaitably punished.

Thank you.
